Qualification

The legislation enabling the recognition and protection of the geographical indication in the originating country of Italy entitled 'Production Discipline of the Protected Designation of Origin "Prosciutto di Carpegna"' was published on May 17, 2010 in the Official Gazette of the Italian Republic. The prosciutto-making tradition of the area of the Commune of Carpegna goes back to the time when Carpegna was a "vicus" of the nearby Roman municipium of Pitinum Pisaurense. In addition, the area has always had many woods, mainly of oak, providing a source of food for pig-breeding. The earliest historical-documentary source is a document for the sale of the saltworks of Cervia (1463) between Novello Malatesta, lord of Cesena, and the Venetian Republic, which gives the County of Carpegna the right to continue mining salt, an essential for curing prosciutto. A canvas depicting St. Anthony (that may be dated 17th-18th cent.) that can be seen in the church of St. Leo in Carpegna shows a prosciutto, evidence of the importance of prosciutto-making. It is a tradition that had been carried on at an artisanal level and that in the early 70s became industrialized, although still completely following traditional processing methods. At the present time, the production rules follow the lines of the already existing specific national regulations for the designation of origin prosciutti of Parma and San Daniele. The requirements for denomination of origin products depend on the environmental conditions and on natural and human factors. In particular, the unique character of the raw material is strictly tied to the defined geographical macrozone. In the area which supplied the raw material, the development of livestock-breeding is linked to the extensive cultivation of grains and to the processing of dairy products, which is particularly specialized, making the area very suitable for pig-breeding. The justification for the localized production of Prosciutto di Carpegna lies in the particular conditions of the microzone defined in point c). The qualifying requirements are all tied to the uniqueness of the environmental conditions and the natural and human factors contributing to its making. The morphological, environmental and microclimatic conditions of the defined area are all unique, such as to give the prosciutto very distinct characteristics. The complete absence of polluting industries, the absolute dominance of natural pastures, the expanse of forest of conifers and tall broadleaf trees and the presence of flower and shrub species growing in a climate which is healthy and not excessively humid are the main characteristics of the environment of the commune of Carpegna. The set of "raw material - product - name" is very closely linked to the specific socioeconomic development of this geographic area, such as to give it certain characteristics irreproducible elsewhere.
